Article I - Naming & Purpose

Section 1. Official Name.

The organization shall be known as the Citizen's Bank Fund at East Tennessee State University (the "Fund"). The Fund is a student led educational investment organization and shall use its official name consistently in approved correspondence, records, and publications.

Section 2. Purpose and Mission.

The Fund exists to develop students' practical understanding of fundamental and technical investment analysis, portfolio research, economic conditions, financial reporting, and professional responsibility. Its activities are intended to supplement classroom instruction through collaborative, applied experience.

Section 3. Authorized Activities.

The Fund may conduct research meetings, security presentations, macroeconomic reviews, investment discussions, professional outreach, recruitment, website publishing, and other activities approved by its leadership and authorized advisors. No provision of these bylaws independently authorizes the custody or trading of assets.

Section 4. Institutional Relationship.

The Fund shall observe the policies of East Tennessee State University, applicable sponsorship or custody arrangements, and all legal requirements affecting its operation. University approval and external financial safeguards remain controlling where required.

Article II - Membership Classification

Section 1. Core Membership.
Core Members are the Fund's formally admitted, active operating members. They may be assigned investment research, analysis, meetings, and other substantive work and are accountable for the responsibilities of that designation.

Section 2. Sixteen-Member Limit.
The Fund may maintain no more than sixteen (16) Core Members at any time. Executive officers occupying Core Member positions count toward this limit. An unfilled position does not authorize a seventeenth Core Member.

Section 3. Exclusive Stock Voting Rights.
Only active Core Members may cast Fund stock votes on securities, portfolio recommendations, or other investment questions submitted for a membership vote. Each Core Member shall have one vote. Temporary Members, interns, guests, and outside participants shall have no stock voting rights. These votes are internal recommendations and do not override authorized investment execution and financial controls.

Section 4. Use of Fund Membership Credentials.
Only an individual formally admitted as a Core Member may identify themselves as a current Fund member or claim a Core Member or Fund officer position on a résumé, LinkedIn, or comparable professional profile. Temporary Members shall not imply they hold that status. Interns are able to list the fund as relevant experience and are subject to the same standards in terms of membership status as a core member.

Section 5. Temporary (Non-Core) Members.
Temporary Members may be admitted without numerical limit for observation, education, workshops, or limited assignments. Temporary status does not guarantee future Core Membership, access to confidential investment material, stock voting, executive authority, or permission to represent the Fund publicly.

Section 6. Admission and Status Changes.
The Co-Presidents shall approve Core Member admission and may authorize the Secretary to manage applications and maintain the roster. Reclassification, departure, or revocation of status shall be recorded promptly. Any executive removal shall instead follow Article IX.

Section 7. Eligibility and Standards.
All participants shall satisfy applicable university eligibility, conduct, confidentiality, and professionalism requirements. A core tenant of active Co-Presidents is maintaining the prestige of the fund and working towards an incentives-based approach of positions, scholarships or any reward. The fund is purely based on merit and all core members and temporary members must understand that nothing will just be handed out.

Article III - Executive Structure

Section 1. Mandatory Offices.
The Fund shall maintain exactly two (2) Co-President offices—one Technical Co-President and one Fundamental Co-President—at least one (1) Vice-President, and one (1) Secretary, except while a vacancy is being addressed under Article V or X.

Section 2. Optional Co-Vice Presidents.
The Co-Presidents may appoint Co-Vice Presidents when additional continuity or operational division is useful. Their duties and succession priority must be documented at appointment.

Section 3. Additional Positions.
The Co-Presidents may unanimously establish Executive Assistant, Director, Team Lead, Analyst Coordinator, or other positions and committees. Titles alone shall not create rights to appoint officers, change bylaws, approve trades, or override Co-President decisions.

Section 4. Executive Team Definition.
For purposes of amendments and formal executive votes, the Executive Team consists of the two serving Co-Presidents, the Vice President, and the Secretary. For a total of (4) executive members. However a cap of (5) executive members is allowed for the possibility of Co-Vice Presidents.

Section 5. Delegation of Duties.
The Co-Presidents may delegate day-to-day tasks and alter reporting lines. Delegation does not transfer either Co-President's veto right or permanently waive their shared ultimate operational authority, except as specifically limited by these bylaws.

Article IV - Co-Presidents

Section 1. Two Distinct Co-President Offices.

The Fund shall have no more than two (2) Co-Presidents, consisting of one Technical Co-President and one Fundamental Co-President. The offices have equal formal standing, equal internal governing authority, and reciprocal veto rights, notwithstanding their distinct areas of primary responsibility.

Section 2. Technical Co-President.

The Technical Co-President shall primarily emphasize on technical analysis. The Technical Co-President MUST be a technical major, one of the following. (Math, Physics, Engineering, Computer Science; however, minors DO count)

Section 3. Fundamental Co-President.

The Fundamental Co-President shall primarily emphasize on fundamental analysis.

Section 4. Comprehensive Organizational Authority.

Acting together, the Co-Presidents may decide any internal matter concerning positions, partnerships, business relationships, external outreach, membership, project direction, organizational plans, and operations. Their authority includes approving, changing, or ending Fund initiatives, subject to applicable external controls.

Section 5. Mutual Consent and Veto.

Neither Co-President shall impose a major Fund decision over the objection of the other. Either may veto a proposed action, or suspend or reverse an action of a subordinate officer or team. A veto does not require a separate formal vote; an expressed objection prevents the action until the Co-Presidents agree.

Section 6. Appointment and Removal Limits.

The Co-Presidents must unanimously agree on executive appointments. They may reassign duties, but formal involuntary removal from an executive office shall follow the Core Member vote required by Article IX. Neither Co-President may veto a valid removal vote under that article.

Section 7. Decisions, Records, and Boundaries.

Material appointments, partnerships, directives, vetoes, and structural decisions should be but do not have to be recorded by the Secretary. Co-President authority does not supersede ETSU rules, advisor or custodian controls, external agreements, binding voting procedures, or applicable law.

Article V - Vice-President

Section 1. Office and Responsibilities.
The Vice-President supports both Co-Presidents in administration, continuity planning, coordination of research teams, meeting preparation, and other duties formally assigned by the Co-Presidents.

Section 2. Automatic Succession.
Upon the permanent departure of either Co-President, the designated Vice-President shall immediately succeed to the vacant Co-President office, provided the successor remains eligible. The successor assumes the Technical or Fundamental designation of the vacant office unless a lawful transition plan establishes the appropriate allocation.

Section 3. Enrollment Continuity.
At appointment, the Vice-President must ordinarily have an anticipated graduation or enrollment end date later than that of at least one Co-President, so succession remains practical. Known plans to transfer, withdraw, graduate early, or otherwise depart shall be disclosed and incorporated into a transition plan.

Section 4. Replacement Vice-President.
Once a Vice-President assumes a Co-President office, the remaining and incoming Co-Presidents shall unanimously appoint a replacement Vice-President as soon as reasonably practicable. The successor shall not simultaneously occupy both offices.

Section 5. Co-Vice President Order.
If Co-Vice Presidents exist, the Co-Presidents shall designate a first successor and alternate. In the absence of that designation, no individual shall claim automatic priority solely because of title or length of service; the Co-Presidents shall resolve the succession under Article X.

Section 6. Limitations.
Vice-Presidents may act within delegated authority but cannot unilaterally select executive officers, overrule a Co-President, revise protected articles, or authorize restricted financial actions.

Article VI - Secretary

Section 1. Primary Office.
The Secretary is the Fund's lead administrative and documentation officer and shall carry out directions issued by the Co-Presidents within the scope of these bylaws.

Section 2. Website Stewardship.
The Secretary's principal recurring duty is maintaining www.citizensbankfund.com. Responsibilities include website content, accurate rosters, approved officer information, historical records, technical updates, corrections, and development of new pages or features when directed. For technical questions ever regarding www.citizensbankfund.com you can reach the original secretary who created the website at Robertbishoptn@gmail.com.

Section 3. Procedures and Records.
The Secretary shall maintain organizational procedures, application materials, membership classifications, official notices, project records, correspondence, and the current bylaws. Material actions and amendments shall be entered into an accessible governance archive.

Section 4. Outreach and Applications.
The Secretary may organize applications, screen submissions, schedule interviews, coordinate outreach, and communicate with prospective participants, subject to the Co-Presidents' authority over Core Membership and executive appointments.

Section 5. Intern Supervision and Selection.
The Secretary shall oversee intern progress, assignments, suitability, and continued participation. The Secretary may select or discontinue an intern, subject to eligibility rules and either Co-President's supervisory veto. Interns may assist with Secretary functions only with Co-President permission.

Section 6. Class Standing Requirement.
The Secretary must ordinarily be an ETSU freshman or sophomore at appointment. Both serving Co-Presidents may unanimously authorize an exception when doing so better serves continuity or the Fund's administrative needs.

Section 7. Access and Transition.
The Secretary shall transfer access and documentation to a designated successor upon departure.

Article VII - Organizational Flexibility & Restructuring

Section 1. Broad Power to Organize.
The serving Co-Presidents, acting unanimously, may establish, dissolve, consolidate, rename, or redistribute internal teams, operational portfolios, committees, and subordinate roles as the Fund's needs change.

Section 2. Flexible Reporting Relationships.
The Fund need not permanently follow a conventional hierarchy below the mandatory offices. The Co-Presidents may authorize project-based teams, dual reporting arrangements, temporary responsibilities, or a materially different workflow of their choosing without a bylaw amendment.

Section 3. Continuing Governance.
Restructuring shall not remove the two distinct Co-President offices, the required Vice-President and Secretary, the Core Member cap, protected succession rights, stock voting eligibility, or the executive removal process unless amendment is permitted and completed under Article XIV.

Section 4. Documentation.
The Secretary shall maintain a dated record of material structural changes, naming the responsible officers and reporting relationships. Such changes are administrative directives, not constitutional amendments.

Article VIII - Internship Program

Section 1. High-School Intern.
No more than one (1) high-school intern may participate at any one time, subject to age-related safeguards, supervision, confidentiality obligations, and necessary ETSU or sponsoring-institution permissions.

Section 2. Provisional External Intern.
The Fund may maintain no more than one (1) provisional intern enrolled at a school other than ETSU. This placement is not recommended as a routine practice and shall be used only when the Secretary and Co-Presidents identify a specific benefit.

Section 3. Status and Restrictions.
An intern is not automatically a Core Member, Temporary Member under university rules, executive officer, or stock voter. Internship participation does not authorize access to securities trading, private sponsor records. However the position does have the same public facing permissions as a core member and can list their experience on LinkedIn, Resumes, or any other area they seem fit.

Section 4. Selection and Review.
The Secretary supervises intern recruitment, selection, work progress, and retention, subject to either Co-President's veto. The Co-Presidents may suspend or end an internship to address safety, eligibility, conduct, or operational concerns.

Article IX - Executive Appointments & Removal

Section 1. Appointment Vote.
Each executive appointment requires unanimous agreement of the two serving Co-Presidents, except automatic succession under Article V. No general membership election shall appoint a Co-President. Co-Presidents cannot be put up for a removal vote.

Section 2. Definition of Removal.
Removal means involuntarily terminating an individual's executive title and governing authority. Assignment changes, routine supervision, and the expiration of a short-term assignment do not by themselves constitute removal. However for example stripping an executive member of their executive membership rights would constitute a removal.

Section 3. Core Member Vote Required.
The involuntary removal of any serving executive officer, including either Co-President, requires affirmative votes from more than one-half of currently occupied Core Member seats. With all sixteen (16) seats occupied, at least nine (9) affirmative votes are required. Each Core Member has one vote.

Section 4. Non-Vetoable Result.
A properly conducted and documented removal vote under this article is binding internally and may not be blocked or reversed by an individual Co-President veto.

Section 5. Notice and Ballot.
A proposed removal shall be communicated to Core Members with the stated grounds and a reasonable opportunity for the officer to respond. The Secretary or a neutral Core Member shall record the roster of eligible voters, the count, and the result; a confidential ballot may be used.

Section 6. Vacancies and Succession.
Removal of a Co-President immediately triggers the succession arrangements in Articles V and X. All other vacancies shall be filled by unanimous Co-President appointment. If an affected office is vacant or contested, the remaining authorized leadership and advisor shall implement the required process.

Section 7. Record of Service.
Resignations, removals, appointments, and effective dates shall be documented accurately. A removal does not authorize deletion of historical recognition protected by Article XI.

Article X - Co-President Selection & Succession

Section 1. Appointment Principle.
Co-President leadership is intended to pass through the judgment and designation of prior Co-Presidents and the designated Vice-President succession process, rather than through popularity-based elections.

Section 2. Prohibition of Elections.
Election of a Co-President by the general membership, Core Members, outside advisors, or informal campaigning is barred as an internal selection mechanism. A Core Member vote required for removal under Article IX does not constitute a Co-President election.

Section 3. Ordinary Successor.
The designated eligible Vice-President shall succeed immediately to a permanently vacant Technical or Fundamental Co-President office. Before anticipated graduation or departure, the Co-Presidents should record an approved succession sequence and arrange the Vice-President vacancy that follows.

Section 4. Extraordinary Succession.
If no eligible designated Vice-President is available, the remaining Co-President shall select the replacement, giving effect to any documented direction of preceding Co-Presidents. If both offices become vacant at once, the last recorded joint succession designation shall govern, subject to applicable university approval.

Section 5. Continuing Authority.
A former Co-President's recorded successor designation shall be preserved as part of the Fund's governance archive. No person may claim an executive office through an unrecorded agreement when a controlling, valid designation exists.

Section 6. Permanent and Non-Amendable Article.
Article X is declared permanently protected against amendment, repeal, suspension, renumbering intended to evade its substance, or indirect reversal by any internal executive vote or reorganization. This restriction governs the Fund internally and does not supersede mandatory law or ETSU requirements.

Article XI - Historical Preservation & Recognition

Section 1. Permanent Recognition of Former Co-Presidents.
Every person who has served as a Co-President shall remain identified accurately in the Fund's permanent leadership history. Graduation, resignation, removal, disagreement, or a later change in leadership shall not alone justify erasing a prior Co-President's service.

Section 2. Public Historical Materials.
The Fund shall retain past Co-Presidents in applicable website timelines, archived leadership pages, official historical media, and similar institutional records. Material maintained at www.citizensbankfund.com shall continue to acknowledge their tenure and role accurately.

Section 3. Administration of Records.
The Secretary shall preserve the chronology of service and verify names, titles, and dates. The Co-Presidents may choose how to display the archive, but may not eliminate a former Co-President from the Fund's history for personal, political, or internal organizational reasons.

Section 4. Accuracy, Privacy, and Compliance.
Factual corrections may be made where warranted; restricted or unlawful material may be handled under applicable privacy, safety, record-retention, or university requirements. The historical fact of service should remain recorded through an appropriate alternative when a particular image or item cannot remain public.

Section 5. Permanent and Non-Amendable Article.
Article XI shall not be amended, repealed, suspended, or undermined indirectly by a future Executive Team or Co-President. The provision is internally permanent, subject only to overriding legal or university requirements.

Article XII - Disciplinary Procedures & Enforcement

Section 1. Executive Responsibility.
The Co-Presidents shall direct the interpretation and ordinary enforcement of these bylaws and may adopt supplementary standards of performance, conduct, attendance, confidentiality, and professionalism.

Section 2. Permitted Measures.
Proportionate responses may include coaching, warning, access limitation, suspension of assigned duties, reassignment, reclassification of a non-executive member, or a recommendation for removal. Executive office removal remains governed exclusively by Article IX.

Section 3. Notice and Opportunity to Respond.
Before a substantial sanction, the affected participant should be informed of the issue and allowed an opportunity to respond, except when immediate action is required to protect people, information, or Fund operations.

Section 4. Limits on Vetoes and Sanctions.
Co-President veto authority remains effective over subordinate operational decisions but shall not overturn the protected provisions of Articles X and XI or a valid executive removal vote under Article IX.

Section 5. Written Record.
Material disciplinary measures shall be recorded by the Secretary or a neutral designee, with confidential details restricted appropriately.

Article XIII - Technical & Interdisciplinary Representation

Section 1. Standing Technical Representation.
The Fund shall maintain at least one (1) participating member with a technical academic major or minor at all times; if a vacancy occurs, leadership shall pursue recruitment promptly and in good faith. Qualifying areas include mathematics, physics, engineering, computer science, and comparable technical disciplines approved by the Co-Presidents.

Section 2. Academic Minors Qualify.
An eligible academic minor in a technical subject satisfies this requirement even when the member's primary major is in business, accounting, finance, or another nontechnical subject.

Section 3. Active Recruitment Obligation.
Where technical representation is absent, leadership shall make all reasonable efforts through outreach, applications, and campus relationships to recruit an eligible technical student as promptly as practicable.

Section 4. Recruitment Standards.
This academic-diversity objective does not authorize unlawful discrimination or the relaxation of university eligibility, conduct, or access requirements. The Technical Co-President office itself does not substitute for this academic qualification unless its holder qualifies.

Article XIV - Amendment Procedures

Section 1. Proposals.
Any executive officer may submit a proposed amendment in writing, identifying its purpose, exact language, and affected Articles. The Secretary shall distribute the proposal to all voting executive officers.

Section 2. Unanimity Requirement.
An amendment requires an affirmative vote of one hundred percent (100%) of all currently serving members of the Executive Team as defined in Article III. Abstention, nonresponse, or a negative vote defeats the proposal.

Section 3. Co-President Approval.
Both serving Co-Presidents must approve every proposed amendment. Ordinary delegation, temporary absence, or subordinate operational authority does not permit an alternate executive to waive the requirement.

Section 4. Protected Articles.
Articles X and XI are non-amendable. No amendment to another Article may be used to defeat their protected purpose, circumvent the succession or historical-recognition rules, or remove their permanent status.

Section 5. Documentation and Effective Date.
The Secretary shall record the final amendment text, vote, dates, approving officers, and version number. An adopted amendment becomes operative after any university or other mandatory review required for the Fund.

Section 6. Administrative Corrections.
The Secretary may correct spelling, formatting, or pagination without a vote only where no change in substance, rights, definitions, or authority results. Renumbering Articles X or XI in a way that weakens their protections is not clerical.

Article XV - Fund Operations & Administration

Section 1. Core Member Meeting Right.

Each active Core Member may request one (1) special governance meeting per academic semester with at least one Co-President present. The request shall be made to the Secretary or a Co-President, who shall arrange a reasonable meeting time during that semester. The right is not exhausted by attending ordinary Fund meetings.

Section 2. Regular Meetings and Notice.

The Executive Team shall establish a schedule for ordinary meetings, presentations, and research reviews. Meeting changes and special sessions should be communicated in advance where practicable, along with an agenda or description of purpose.

Section 3. Stock Voting Administration.

Stock votes may be called on a security or portfolio recommendation in accordance with Fund procedures. Only the current Core Member roster may vote; each eligible Core Member has one vote, and results shall be recorded. The Executive Team may set reasonable quorum and presentation standards consistent with Article II. To once again establish the fact that members votes on a position decision are practically suggestions with the Co-Presidents authority presiding over all decisions In regard to the portfolio.

Section 4. Research and Publication.

Research reports, market opinions, public communications, website updates, and external presentations shall be reviewed through procedures adopted by the Co-Presidents. No member may promise a Fund investment decision, sponsorship, or partnership without authorization except for the Secretary for outreach reasons in a very limited capacity.

Section 5. Investment and Financial Controls.

All asset custody, transactions, investment execution, budgets, and expenditures remain subject to the rules of the actual account owners, authorized signatories, faculty or institutional advisors, sponsors, and applicable law. Internal votes or officer titles do not independently confer trading authority.

Section 6. Records and Access.

The Secretary shall safeguard an up-to-date roster distinguishing Core and Temporary Members, current voting executives, intern status, bylaws versions, meeting notes, major approvals, stock-vote outcomes, and accurate historical records. Sensitive records shall be available only to authorized persons.

Section 7. Institutional Requirements and Dissolution.

The Fund shall maintain any advisor, registration, training, and compliance arrangements required by ETSU. If operations end, assets and records shall be handled according to legal ownership, donor restrictions, institutional policies, and governing agreements.

Article XVI - Ratification & Signatures

Section 1. Adoption.

These bylaws constitute the proposed operating rules of the Citizen's Bank Fund. They shall become effective only after approval by the authorized Executive Team.

Section 2. Recognition of Protected Articles.

By signing, the officers acknowledge the permanent status assigned internally to Articles X and XI, the unanimous executive amendment procedure of Article XIV, and the Core Member executive removal procedure of Article IX.

Section 3. Custody and Version Control.

The Secretary shall retain an executed copy, make the approved current version available to appropriate members, and preserve earlier versions as part of the Fund's historical records.
